Welcome to Eastham

. . . Where Natural Beauty Stays on Cape Cod

IT'S your vacation, so why not enjoy it? In Eastham, you are in a position to take full advantage of a real old fashioned New England vacation. Some of the most superb vacation coastline with its many beaches and facilities on the whole Atlantic seaboard are at your command.

Eastham's little side roads give you the beauty of wild roses, pine woods and sparkling fresh water ponds. Add to these the modern roads criss-crossing through the town as though to intertwine the natural beauty with a convenience and almost tangible sense of welcome and you will realize Eastham can't be beat for joyous, comfortable living, whether for a week, a month or your lifetime.

Not only will you enjoy the summer months but more and more we find our guests enjoy attending an old fashioned New England Town meeting in the early Spring. And who could ask for anything better than a traditional Thanksgiving centered among the Historical surroundings of its origin.

Eastham, is a year round vacation land . . . Why not take advantage of it? ? ?

From all your friends, the townspeople of Eastham

ABOUT THE COVER

Three guesses as to what the sleeping beauty is going to say in the next few seconds when his sweet dreams end.

Eastham artist Harold D. White says perhaps he should do a sequel picture to show what happened. Color the air blue! And show a rear view of Miss Leap Frog going that-a-way with her playmates, followed by screaming gulls.

Suggestion: look before you leap frog.

THE NAUSET INDIANS

WHEN the little group of seven men with their families left Plymouth to begin the new settlement of Eastham on Cape Cod they first called the place "Nauset" for the Indians who lived there. This was one of the peaceful tribes that inhabited the Cape all of whom were under the jurisdiction of the great Wamponoag sagamore, Massasoit. Their village was described in 1605 by the French explorer Samuel de Champlain as being a "great number of little houses surrounding Nauset Harbor". We learn from the early historians that the ordinary Indian home was called a "weto" which was made of long saplings stuck in the ground in a circle, covered with thick mats of flags, bulrushes and deer skins and lined with finer mats. Their favorite food was corn. In raising this, the Indians used the large shells of sea clams for hoes and fertilized the soil with herring. Their canoes were made either of pine logs or birch bark. The hollowed logs were called "dug-outs" and were much heavier than the birch bark canoes in which the paddler was able to move through the waves with great speed.

There are very few records of any trouble between the Nausets and the white men, the Indians seeming disposed to help the newcomers in all ways. They showed the settlers how to raise fine corn crops, how to catch fish in nets or weirs, to dig for clams which they called "saquish" and to find the little native cranberries which they used for medicinal purposes as well as for food.

It was not long before their own actual living conditions were much improved by their association with the settlers with whom they traded thereby procuring many articles they had never before possessed. Wampum was used as legal tender until the year 1661. This was the deftly cut and polished beads which they made from periwinkle shells or the purple part of quahaug shells.

"Sitting Rock" at the edge of Eastham's Nauset Marsh, said to have been used by the Nauset Indians for just such relaxation as portrayed here by Ralph Chase, a present-day Eastham "native" and one of the last of the species.

Beginning with the year 1681 the Indians who owned property were required to pay taxes to the town. At the same time two Indian constables were appointed to maintain order among them. Yearly meetings were held at which time the laws of the Colony were read and explained to them.

In 1701 it was voted that the Indians should not live on the town "commons" but should be confined at such places as the town should order. The section set apart for them in Eastham was on the hill which overlooked the Salt Pond, the locality acquiring the name "Treat Hill". This is now the location of the new Visitors' Center of the National Seashore Park.

The Rev. Samuel Treat did much to better the lives of the Nausets. He learned the Nauset tongue in order to preach to them and to train some of them to become religious instructors. He spent much time among the Native families showing great wisdom in applying his Christian teachings to their daily life. He joined in their fun, playing games and entering in their more strenuous sports. He nursed them too in times of sickness, making himself so beloved that in 1675 when the war was started by King Philip against the white men, the Nausets refused to join. By 1685 nearly all the native Indians were attending the Church meetings of the white people. Rev. Treat died in March 1717 during the great snow of that winter. It was a fine tribute to him that his Indian friends begged to be allowed to carry the body of their beloved teacher from his home on Fort Hill to its place of burial in the old Churchyard on the cove.

It was estimated that there were about 100 Nauset families in 1621. The 1764 census showed only 4 Nausets in the town of Eastham and in 1802 but one Indian was left. How sad must have been the life of that solitary native, the last of the Nauset race in Eastham.

For Fishing At Its Best, Fish In Eastham

During the summer the striped bass is king of salt water game fish in Cape Cod waters and Eastham's striper fishing is hard to beat. Surf casting all along the tides at Nauset Beach lures the experienced and the novice to try for the "big ones." And charter sport fishing boats, many skippered by Eastham men, will take you from Rock Harbor in quest of stripers offshore in the Bay.

Bluefish entice the angler too and are caught in both surf and bay in season. Flounder, tautog and a number of other good eating bottom fish make most any fishing trip from Eastham's shores something to recall happily.

Surfcasting from Eastham's broad beaches is a sport equally thrilling to expert or novice.

Eastham's Town Cove is an excellent spot for flounder and plaice fish and trolling for striped bass here offers additional thrills. There are several boat liveries on the Cove shore so fishing can be fun for all the family.

EASTHAM'S SUPERB BEACHES ARE IDEAL FOR ALL AGES
WHETHER YOU WALK, SWIM,
SUN, SURF, OR BUILD CASTLES

Eastham's famous beaches both bay and ocean, are never more than a few minutes away no matter where you stay here. Nauset or the Great Beach extends for over five miles along the Atlantic Ocean in Eastham. Its broad sands play host to thousands yet it is never crowded for leisurely strolls or, between dips, for relaxation to the tune of the surf's steady orchestration.

There's beach play and healthful exercise aplenty and Nauset Beach is ideal for all bathers at low tide. But parents of very young children may prefer the warmer and generally shallower bathing available at high tide at the many public beaches along Eastham's Cape Cod Bay shore.

Clear, fresh water ponds, too, offer unexcelled bathing when you prefer a change from salt and surf.

HAPPY AS A CLAM (Steamed)

By PHIL SCHWIND

This was going to be a recipe for razor clam pie, or a barbecue-grill clam bake. But, just having crept away from the table and a full meal of steamed clams, I have to share my wife's secret with other folks who enjoy shellfish that taste like shellfish.

First, on Cape Cod, clams are clams, and quahogs are quahogs and not clams. You may know them as round clams, hard clams, cherrystones or littlenecks, but they are still quahogs of one size or another. Clams, to a Cape Codder, are the twice-longer than wide, relatively soft-shelled variety.

The color of the shell has nothing to do with the flavor, any more than the taste of brown eggs differ from the taste of white eggs. The shell-color of clams is due entirely to the color of the sand or mud from which they are taken. White clams come from white sand. Black clams come from mud or black sand. Clam shells with an orange edge simply imply that there is a certain amount of mineral (probably iron—I don't know for I am no biologist) or fresh water in the sand in which the clams grow. Generally speaking, the tenderer the shell, the faster growing the clam.

For my part, for flavor, I would pick the roughest-looking, roughest-shelled soft-shelled clams, had I a choice. If you dig your own clams, you'll find the best-flavored ones at the edge of the sedge grass along the Cape Cod Bay side. The digging is hard and the clams are rough-looking, but the flavor is the finest kind. And no other clams have the flavor of the fresh ones you dig yourself.

You should have, per serving, about two dozen clams at least, from two to three inches long. Get a license at the Town Hall, and don't take any under two inches or the Shellfish Constable — ME — will catch you. (The two inch minimum length is a state law as well as a town law.)

Wash your clams well while you are still at the shore. Take them home and put them in a pan of heavily salted water, or add a little corn meal to the water if you wish. In an hour or so the clams obligingly will have cleared themselves of most of their residual sand and grit. Wash them in cold, running water.

Put about a half-inch of water in a kettle, ample or oversized to hold all your clams. If you have a grating or round cake rack to place in the bottom of the kettle it will help.

Put in your washed clams, slap on the cover, and turn up the heat. Twenty minutes should serve to bring the water to the boil and steam your clams. Do not cook them any longer than necessary to make the top clams open, for the longer you cook them the tougher they'll get.

Serve with tongs or a ladle while they are still steaming hot. On the side should be a small bowl of the hot clam liquor in which to dunk the clams, and a bowl of the same size with melted butter. Not margarine — butter is better with steamed clams. Also on the side, put a pile of paper napkins, for with steamed clams you'll have more buttered chins.

They should be served with cole slaw or a tossed salad, and if you have a really hungry crowd, with hot johnnycake under a napkin on which should be embroidered, "Hot Johnnycake makes the Butterfly."

EASTHAM HISTORICAL SOCIETY, INC.

THE Eastham Historical Society, Inc. was founded in 1963. Membership now numbers 394 members, resident and non-resident. The object of the Society is to create and foster an interest in the Town of Eastham, to promote historical research, to collect and preserve artifacts, photographs, historical documents and to provide for their proper custody.

The above photograph shows the exterior of the restored 1869 one room schoolhouse, now the Schoolhouse Museum, located opposite the Visitors Center in the Cape Cod National Seashore. Funds are still needed to further this and other projects and contributions can be sent to the Society, at P.O. Box 8, Eastham, Mass. 02642.

The Schoolhouse Museum was opened for the first time on July 17, 1966 and closed for the season on October 15th, 1966. The Museum hours for 1967 will be Saturday afternoons in June and September; and Monday, Wednesday, and Friday afternoons in July and August, from 2 to 5 p.m. The admission charge will be 25 cents per person. Suitable gifts for the Society and Museum will be welcomed, and may be left at the Eastham Public Library, or by getting in touch with Frederick H. Jewell, Curator, at Tel. 255-2136, who will gladly arrange to pick them up.

Apart from the establishment of the Museum and lectures, historical signs have been placed at the Old Cove Burial Ground on Route 6, and where the Society completed its project of placing memorial stones on the unmarked graves of Mayflower passengers Constance Hopkins Snow, Giles Hopkins, and Lieut. Joseph Rogers; the second old cemetery on Bridge Road, both having been sites of the first three Congregational churches; and the First Encounter Site on the Bay side. Two historical milestones have been moved to the Schoolhouse grounds. The Society is sponsoring the Eastham Historical Bikeway around Eastham for bicycle riders, maps will be available at the Museum, Information Booth, and American Youth Hostel on Bridge Road. On Arbor Day the Society in cooperation with Childs-Mayflower Movers of Hyannis planted Mayflower trees at the Old Cove Burial Ground and the Museum grounds. Further projects are to place historical markers on old houses and other historical sites; and other worthy projects will be given consideration.

New members will be welcomed. The membership is $1.00 per person a year for adults, 50 cents for children. Applications may be sent to Mrs. E. E. Kattwinkel, Sec'y., P.O. Box 8, Eastham, Mass. 02642.
